Little Heaven

PITCH

Right In the heart of the Ethiopian capital Addis Ababa is a small orphanage called 'Little Heaven'. One of the orphans, Lydia, is 13 today. A truly joyful event, because she can now move to the 'other house' where all of the 'big kids' live. Unfortunately this special day is overshadowed by the shocking news delivered to her by the head nurse: Lydia is HIV positive.

SYNOPSIS

The children living in the Ethiopian orphanage 'Little Heaven' are told that they have HIV on the day of their 13th birthday.

For the main character Lydia, this is without a doubt one of the most emotional events in her life, and with difficulty she can now understand why she is an orphan, and why she is so often ill and in hospital. More significantly she can now understand why the husband of her sister Betty didn't want to have Lydia in their home any longer.

In spite of this sad news, Lydia has no intention of sitting at home being depressed. She wants to live, and to dream. This is why as soon as she arrives into the room of the new orphanage, she hangs her motto above her bed: 'I want to be happy every day'.

The other children in the new orphanage do all they can to support Lydia. At first glance, they look like any normal group of young children: they go to school, they play together in the courtyard of the orphanage, and they have fun laughing on their bunk beds.

The children in the orphanage live as independently as they can. Apart from taking their daily dose of medication they try as much as possible to exclude the burden of illness from their daily lives. However, Lydia suffers quite a lot with her own health and is continually confronted with her illness during frequent hospital visits. 'I sometimes feel like a chemist shop with all the medication I have to take,' she sighs. Lydia's illness also prevents her from doing what she absolutely adores the most but no longer has the strength for, which is dancing.

The children in the orphanage receive news that the students with the best results can go to a better school in the coming year. This news encourages Lydia to persevere with her illness, and towards her dream to become a teacher later on in life, and she is now more determined than ever before to make this dream come true.

The director, Lieven Corthouts, lived in the "Little Heaven" orphanage for two years and placed Lydia's story at the heart of this documentary. The director follows Lydia, the main character with HIV in the lead-up to an important school exam. Will Lydia's marks be high enough for her to get into a better school and create a light at the end of this tunnel of struggle and set-backs?

Lydia reveals to viewers how her life vacillates between hope and despair through fragments from her diary. Little Heaven is a hard and confrontational story that never gives in to a sense of desperation thanks to the energy and vitality of the children and their caretakers in the orphanage.

In 2001, I travelled to Ethiopia for the first time. The country fascinated me to such an extent that I have now lived there, with some breaks in Belgium, for 8 years. During these 8 years, I have moved several times and the capital, Addis Ababa, has been my second home for the past 3 years. Meanwhile, I have learned their language, Amharic. My first visit to the Little Heaven orphanage in Addis Ababa was 5 years ago. The circumstances and personal stories of its inhabitants have never left me and I had regularly visited the orphanage until a few months ago, when I moved in. I wanted to make my next film here.

Addis Ababa is a bustling, vibrant city set against the backdrop of a land with a fascinating history and its own rich culture. It's a culture that is very different to that of other African countries, a culture that in its heyday was often closely associated with the West. At the other hand, Ethiopia has become one of the poorest countries in the world, while the population continues to soar. Despite low life expectancy and high infant mortality, the population grows by no less than 2 million every year.

Everywhere you go you are confronted with street children. According to UNICEF, 30 % of children in Addis Ababa between the ages of 10 and 14 no longer live with their parents and Ethiopia has one of the largest populations of orphans in the world, with 13 % of all children having lost one or both parents. That makes 4.6 million orphans, a massive figure.

HIV/AIDS is one of the major culprits, with as many as 800,000 Ethiopian children having lost their parents to this illness. Nowhere else in the world are so many people infected with HIV as on the African continent, primarily in the sub-Saharan region. Today 1 in 10 people in Addis Ababa are infected with HIV, and it continues to advance. Every year, thousands of children are born with the disease that is passed on by their parents. They are known as 'kids with the disease'.

It goes without saying that the life expectancy for children born with HIV is particularly low. Several factors keep these figures so high, but 'ignorance' is probably the main cause.

Due to financial constraints, AIDS inhibitors, drugs that significantly increase quality of life and life expectancy, are unattainable for most Africans and that applies to Ethiopians too. Only 37 % of infected Ethiopians have access to these vital drugs.

If we want to reverse this trend, there needs to be more support and structure to help the African people and to protect them by means of large scale prevention campaigns. HIV infected people need to be better informed and to receive more material assistance, with daily access to medications. There also has to be sufficient food every single day, more attention to personal hygiene and so forth.

By using an original and very personal treatment of this material, I hope to give this issue the attention it so urgently needs. This is the intimate story of a group of young children who live in a special orphanage in the turbulent city of Addis Ababa. These orphans have not only lost their parents to AIDS but have to live with the disease themselves.

At first, this may seem like an almost unbearable confrontation with illness and death, seen through the eyes of a child, but with this film I plan an approach that will draw the viewer into a fascinating tale that avoids sensationalism and shock tactics. Clearly, it's a tough subject, but the personal approach means that I focus closely on the positive force that emanates from the individual children, their carers and the amazing care scheme itself.

So I don't wish to make a film that shocks but rather a serene, intimate portrait of a group of children who despite the grim reality of their situation are trying to make the most of their lives and receive the support they deserve.

Little Heaven is the arena of my film, the name of the orphanage right in the centre of Addis Ababa. It is the first orphanage to be founded - some ten years ago - especially for children with HIV. It is situated on a busy dirt road that turns into a mud bath during the rainy season and is constantly subjected to the sounds of the city. The Ethiopian urban noise, that is, consisting of sheep and goats amidst cars, mopeds, pedestrians and the loudspeakers of music shops that play audio cassettes right on to the street.

I intend to tell this story of a special orphanage from the perspective of the group of children (between the ages of 12 and 18) but particularly of one girl in the group: Lydia Berhanu.

Lydia is a highly intelligent and empathetic girl of 13 whom I see as a symbol of the perseverance and life force that the group radiates despite its plight.

For me, Lydia is the personification of countless other children who share her lot in life, and she has the ability to present their story. She very much wants the chance to tell her story, as she is aware that she has had the good fortune to live in this orphanage. She often describes where she lives as a kind of heaven since children with HIV in Africa rarely get this type of care but have to survive on the streets.

For this reason, I don't wish to focus on Lydia as a 13 year old girl infected with HIV but rather allow this film to tell a more universal story of orphans around the world, whether or not infected with HIV. And by extension, all children who have to grow up and become adults in difficult circumstances.

For me, Lydia has the perfect personality to draw the viewer into my personal vision.

CV LIEVEN CORTHOUTS

Lieven Corthouts is a Belgian documentary maker who divides his time between Ethiopia and Belgium. Lieven has lost his heart to the Ethiopian people, culture and nature. He has made several documentaries against the backdrop of this fascinating African country, such as the multi-award winning film My Future (Broadcasted by ARTE, TV3 (Spain), CIRTEF/TV5 MONDE (Conseil International des Radios-Télévisions d'Expression Française), TVI24 (Portugal) Prize best debut at Miradasdoc, Official selection New York independent film festival (screenings in New York and Los Angeles), Official selection Edic Doc, Official Selection Docville, Official Selection International film festival of Huesca, Official Selection Two riverside International film festival (first film), Official Selection Ethiopian film festival, Official Selection Addis Ababa international film festival, Special screening Belgrade international short and documentary film festival, Special screening Trois continents Film festival. Further, he has made several documentaries for NGOs and is a sought after consultant for filmmakers who want to film in Ethiopia.

CV ERIC GOOSSENS

Eric Goossens // studied communication sciences at the Catholic University of Leuven. Afterwards, he was an intern for a year at the Centre for Audiovisual Arts of CUL. He organised several national and international workshops for the FEMI (Flemish Media Institute), under the artistic supervision by Frank Daniel (American producer/screenwriter) and Stephen Peet (BBC). In 1990, Eric Goossens joined Little Big One as a television producer to work on various projects for the VRT, RTBF and Canal+. In 1995, Eric Goossens founded the production company Off World. Together with Anton Roebben, an exceptional animation expert, Eric founded the production company Walking The Dog, which produces creative animation films and series. Eric Goossens is also the vice chairman of anim.be, the association of Belgian animation producers.

CV FREDERIK NICOLAI

Frederik Nicolai // has been sharing his love for documentaries with Eric Goossens since 2002. Frederik started his career by executive producing fiction series, feature and short films in Belgium and the Netherlands. Then he completely dedicated himself to author documentaries and collaborated with broadcasters like VRT, NPS, VPRO,... Some successful films from that period were: 4 Elements (Jiska Rickels, opening film of the International Documentary Film Festival of Amsterdam 2006), Filming without boundaries (about George Sluizer, by Hans Heijen), Panna (Nordin Iasfar),... After years of commuting between Bruxelles and Amsterdam, Frederik chose Brussels as his home. Ever since, he has been working with Eric Goossens to expand the record and international network of Off World. Besides producer Frederik is also a direction coach for young filmmakers.

Off World is an independent production company based in Brussels, capital of Flanders, Belgium and Europe. Eric Goossens founded Off World in 1995, joined by Frederik Nicolai in 2002.

Off World's main goal is producing author documentaries for the national and international market. Over the last few years, the company has built up a large portfolio and a solid reputation as delegate producer and co-producer of many creative and original documentaries. Off World has a long-term collaboration with their national broadcasting companies VRT-Canvas, Lichtpunt and RTBF and national co-producers (Eklektik, Simple Production, Luna Blue Film...) Moreover, Off World co-produces documentaries with foreign broadcasting companies on a regular basis such as ARTE, IKON, RAI, TV3 and with foreign producers such as Zeppers Film (NL), Moztu Filmak (ESP), Amo Film, Monkey Bay, French Connection (FR). Together with our close partner Walking The Dog, a feature film animation production company, Off World produced several animated documentaries.

Off World's trademark is a contemporary and wayward look on the world, which springs from the passion and talent of the documentary authors.

Off World has build up a long term collaboration with renowned and distinguished documentary authors. However, Off World is also consistently investing in young filmmakers, as a creative investment for the future.

Off World maintains an personal editorial line in order to construct a clear frame for all its productions. In the centre of that frame we place the author's personal and original approach and his/her critical view on an historic or current society. We want to mesmerize the viewer, invite him to think and develop new insights. After all, that is the basis for a broader and more sceptical view on the world. This is never a luxury in our society that all too often evolves in just a single dimension.

Therefore, our documentaries must contain universal values and must be able to reach people across all borders. Starting from its own clear and sometimes even local context, the documentary can clear the path for a broader truth.

Besides being a key player in the industry, Off World also works to usher Flanders into the global documentary industry. In 2009, the production company cofounded the professional organisation Flanders Doc along with fellow Flemish documentary producers. Flanders Doc unites creative forces in order to enhance the level of performance, professionalism and globalisation of the Flemish documentary industry. Off World is also an active EDN member.

Four stories of farmers seen from the angle of their passion for their beloved countryside and the passion of these farmers for the very badly needed love of a woman. Because farming life is above all a family affair, where men and women survive together. Fields, like women, need to be sown when they are fertile. Is it possible to have the same passion for the land as for a woman? We go on a journey through all the seasons throughout a whole year in search of the woman behind the farmer and we ask whether a farmer can work his fields without the love of his wife.
